OUR YEAR IN THE SHORTEST LETTER WE COULD MANAGE

Dear friends and family, it has been a full, good year. We moved gardens around, lost a glove, found a better recipe, and finally fixed the porch light. The kids grew more than the tomatoes, which is saying something, because the tomatoes did great.

In March we taught Milo to ride without training wheels, in July we took the trip Grandma has been planning since forever, and in October our street's block party had actual traffic cones again. There were ordinary Tuesdays too, and honestly we loved most of them.

Wherever you are this season, we hope your table is full, your batteries are charged, and your socks have no holes. Come see us if you can. We mean it.

Alex, Sam & Milo

THIS YEAR, IN SHORT

Milo, age 9 — lost two teeth, found a lizard, keeps them both in memory.

Alex — finished the deck, started the sourdough, burned exactly one loaf.

Sam — new role at work, still the fastest jigsaw puzzler in the house.

The dog — still good. Extra good. Needs no update.

FAVORITE LITTLE MOMENT

The night the whole family sang the wrong words to the same song, loudly, on purpose.
